

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

A method is for admitting an information provider to a process for transmitting data between information providers and information searchers via a transmission device. According to the method, test data that is transmitted by an information provider to a transmission device and represents data supplied by the information provider is received, and the quality thereof is assessed by the transmission device. The information provider is then admitted by the transmission device to the data transmission process between information providers and information searchers according to the quality of the test data.